QUESTION PAPER

(June - 2019)

(Solved)

UNDERSTANDING POETRY

Time: 3 Hours | [Maximum Marks: 100

Notes: Answer the following questions.

Q. 1. (a) Comment on the following passages in respect of the prosodic features:

(i) Thy way not min e, O Lord However dark it be; Lead me by thine own hand, Choose out the path for me.

Ans. These lines are written in regular iambic trimeter. The rhyme scheme is abab.

Also Ref.: See Chapter-2, Page No. 9, Q. No. 2.

(ii) How fleet is the glance of the mind! Compared with the speed of its flight: The tempest itself lags behind And the swift winged arrows of light.

Ans. These lines are in anapestic trimester. However, the first foot of each of the first three lines is an iambus. The rhyme scheme is abab.

Also Ref.: See Chapter-2, Page No. 12, Q. No. 8 (a).

(b) Write short notes on the following:

(i) Ballad Stanza

Ans. Before everything else, it is very important to throw light on the etymology of the word ballad. Etymologically, the word ballad has been taken from Latin word ballare, which means dancing song. Ballad is a shorter narrative poem, which comprises of short stanzas. F.B Gum has explained the definition of ballad as, "A poem meant for singing, quite impersonal in material, probably connected in its origins with the communal dance but submitted to a process of oral traditions among people who are free from literary influences and fairly homogeneous in character." Ballad is a short story in verse, which is intended to be sung with the accompaniment of music. It is opposite to the Epic, which is a lengthy story in verse. It is a popular poem among the common folks Southern Appalachian Mountains of America.

(ii) Rhyme Royal

Ans. Rhyme royal, rhyme also spelled rime, seven-line iambic pentameter stanza rhyming ababbcc. The rhyme royal was first used in English verse in the 14th century by Geoffrey Chaucer in Troilus and Criseyde and The Parlement of Foules. Traditionally, the name rhyme royal is said to derive from The King is Quair ('The King's Book), attributed to James I of Scotland (1394–1437), but some critics trace the name to the French chant royal. Chaucer probably borrowed it from the French poet and musician Guillaume de Machaut (c. 1300-77), who may have invented it or derived it from earlier French and Provençal poets.

Rhyme royal became the favourite form for long narrative poems during the 15th and early 16th centuries. Shakespeare's Rape of Lucrece (1594) was the last important poem of the period in rhyme royal. Later, Milton experimented with the form, and it was successfully used by William Morris in the 19th century and by John Masefield in the 20th century.

(iii) Satire

Ans. Satire is a genre of literature, and sometimes graphic and performing arts, in which vices, follies, abuses, and shortcomings are held up to ridicule, ideally with the intent of shaming individuals, corporations, government, or society itself into improvement. Although satire is usually meant to be humorous, its greater purpose is often constructive social criticism, using wit to draw attention to both particular and wider issues in society.

2 / NEERAJ: UNDERSTANDING POETRY (JUNE-2019)

A feature of satire is strong irony or sarcasm— "in satire, irony is militant"—but parody, burlesque, exaggeration, juxtaposition, comparison, analogy, and double entendre are all frequently used in satirical speech and writing. This "militant" irony or sarcasm often professes to approve of (or at least accept as natural) the very things the satirist wishes to attack.

(iv) Synecdoche

Ans. Synecdoche is a literary device in which a part of something represents the whole, or it may use a whole to represent a part. Synecdoche may also use larger groups to refer to smaller groups, or vice versa. It may also call a thing by the name of the material it is made of, or it may refer to a thing in a container or packaging by the name of that container or packing.

A synecdoche is a figure of speech in which a term for a part of something refers to the whole of something or vice versa. A synecdoche is a class of metonymy, often by means of either mentioning a part for the whole or conversely the whole for one of its parts.

(v) Terza Rima

Ans. Terza rima is a rhyming verse stanza form that consists of an interlocking three-line rhyme scheme. It was first used by the Italian poet Dante Alighieri. The literal translation of terza rima from Italian is "third rhyme". Terza rima is a three-line stanza using chain rhyme in the pattern ABA BCB CDC DED. There is no limit to the number of lines, but poems or sections of poems written in terza rima end with either a single line or couplet repeating the rhyme of the middle line of the final tercet. The two possible endings for the example above are DED E, or DED EE. There is no set rhythm for terza rima, but in English, iambic pentameter is generally preferred.

The first English poet to write in terza rima was Geoffrey Chaucer, who used it for his "Complaint to His Lady". Although a difficult form to use in English because of the relative paucity of rhyme words available in a language which has, in comparison with Italian, a more complex phonology, terza rima has been used by Thomas Wyatt, John Milton, Lord Byron (The Prophecy of Dante) and Percy Bysshe Shelley ("Ode to the West Wind" and The Triumph of Life). Thomas Hardy also used the form in "Friends Beyond" to interlink the characters and continue the flow of the poem. A number of 20th-century poets also employed the form. These include W. H. Auden, Andrew Cannon, T. S. Eliot, Robert Frost, Elizabeth Jennings, Philip Larkin, Archibald MacLeish, James Merrill, Jacqueline Osherow, Gjertrud Schnacken-berg, Clark Ashton Smith, Derek Walcott, Richard Wilbur and William Carlos Williams. Edward Lowbury's adaptation of the form to six-syllable lines has been named piccola terza rima.

(vi) Apostrophe

Ans. The apostrophe ('or') character is a punctuation mark, and sometimes a diacritical mark, in languages that use the Latin alphabet and some other alphabets. In English it is used for several purposes:

- The marking of the omission of one or more letters (as in the contraction of do not to don't).
- The marking of possessive case of nouns (as in the eagle's feathers, or in one month's time).
- The marking of plurals of individual characters (e.g. p's and q's).

According to Unicode, the apostrophe is the same character as the closing single quotation mark, although the semantics of this character are "context-dependent". (When it functions as a closing quotation mark, it is always paired with an opening quotation mark.) The apostrophe also looks similar to, but is not the same as, the prime symbol (2), which is used to indicate measurement in feet or arcminutes and for various mathematical purposes, and the »okina ( » ), which represents a glottal stop in Polynesian languages. Other substitutes such as ' (acute) and ' (open single quotation mark) are common due to ambiguous treatment of the apostrophe in digital typesetting.

Q. 2. Comment on the following passages with reference to their context.

(a) Yet in these thoughts myself

almost despising, Haply I think on thee, and then my state, Like to the lark at break of day arising. From Sullen earth, sings hymns at heavens gate;

UNDERSTANDING POETRY

EARLY MODERN ENGLISH POETS

Why Read a Poem? And, How to Study Understanding Poetry?

INTRODUCTION

Poetry is for delight, ornament and ability. It is not meant for any technological application and has no social relevance. Poetry does not have any practical use. It is literature and part of liberal culture and education. It is akin to history and philosophy. It entertains the mind of the people those who read and understand poetry.

CHAPTER AT A GLANCE

ANSWERING THE QUESTION 'WHAT IS A POEM?'

Poem is an instance of poetry or an example of poetic expression. Poetry is a variety of literature. The Oxford Dictionary defines poetry as an expression of beautiful or elevated thought, imagination of feeling in appropriate language and usually in metrical form. Poetry can be written in verse as well as prose. A piece of prose poem have all the qualities except metre. Many prose poetry have been written. 'The Book of Job' in the Old Testament and 'Dream Children of Lamb' are examples. Plays have been written in both prose and verse. Shakespeare, G. B. Shaw and T. S. Eliot have written in prose and verse.

A poem is a product of the man, the milieu and the moment. Some of W. B. Yeat's poems like 'September 1913', 'Easter 1916', 'Nineteen Hundred Nineteen' and 'Among School Children' were influenced by the Irish history but Yeats did not give us the details of the events in his poems as a historian does. Poetry is, however, different from history as Aristotle says poetry is finer and more philosophical than history. Poetry expresses the universal and history only the particular.

According to Wallace Stevens, reality is a cliché from which we escape by metaphors. A poet looks at the world as a man looks at a woman.

Mathew Arnold also talks high of poetry. He believes the future of poetry is immense. Theories in politics and science change, but poetry stays.

William Wordsworth says poetry is the breath and finer spirit of all knowledge. Francis Bacon, however, says reason is superior to poetry. John Locke also rejects the doctrine of 'innate ideas' and says that the source of ideas is experience.

John Dryden was influenced more by the scientific ethos of his age. Eugenius in Dryden's Essay of Dramatick Poesy holds the view that his age was superior to the ancients. Eugenius wants the method of science to serve as a model for poets.

According to Alexander Pope, who came at the cusp of neoclassical era in Western Europe, says the office of the poet was to provide felicitous expression

Samuel Johnson says, the poet must write as the interpreter of nature and the legislator of mankind and consider himself as presiding over the thoughts and manners of future generations, as a being superior to the place.

William Wordsworth describes poetry as the breath and finer spirit of all knowledge; it is the impassioned expression which is in the countenance of all science.

ASSIGNMENTS AND TERM-END EXAMINATION

This is the homework a student has to do. The details of the assignments are given below.

Assignments

Assignments promote active reading. Teachers also monitor the students through assignments. Assignments should not be a ritual or university needs. Why Examinations?

Examinations are important in our study. They assess our understanding of the subject. They help in assessing our standing compared to other students. Examination has a long history. It is believed that examinations were conducted for the first time in China in 605 CE during the Sui Dynesty (581-618 CE). In India, East India Company started the examinations. The standardized tests were conducted by the British Universities in the 1850s.

A Model Term-end Examination Question Paper

Given below is a model question paper. It gives an idea how you can pursue your study. Some tips for the final examinations are given:

- Students must understand poetic devices, genres and different metrical compositions.
- Students need to read the poems and should understand the text. In the examinations, students will be asked to explain 4 passages from the prescribed poems.
- Students should read the introduction to different blocks so that they can understand the backgrounds of the poets and the context in which they has written. There will be a question in the paper related to this.

WHY READ A POEM? AND, HOW TO STUDY UNDERSTANDING POETRY?/3

 There will also be questions on the poets, poems and their age. Students will be asked to write two essays in about 750 words each.

A good question paper covers all segments of the course and students should be prepare for that.

CHECK YOUR PROGRESS

Q. 1. Have you talked to your friends about any poem that either you or they may have liked? If not, would you like to do so now and record your response below?

Ans. I talked to my friend about Willian Wordsworth's Tintern Abbey. The poet has expressed his tender feeling towards nature in the poem. I told my friends that the poem is in five sections. The first section establishes the setting for the meditation. But it emphasizes the passage of time: five years have passed, five summers, five long winters... But when the poet is back to this place of natural beauty and serenity, it is still essentially the same.

The view presented is a blend of wildness and order. He can see the entirely natural cliffs and waterfalls; he can see the hedges around the fields of the people; and he can see wreaths of smoke probably coming from some hermits making fire in their cave hermitages. These images evoke not only a pure nature as one might expect, they evoke a life of the common people in harmony with the nature.

The second section begins with the meditation. The poet now realizes that these 'beauteous' forms have always been with him, deep-seated in his mind, wherever he went. This vision has been "Felt in the blood, and felt alone the heart" that is.

The third section contains a kind of doubt; the poet is probably reflecting the reader's possible doubts so that he can go on to justify how he is right and what he means. He doubts, for just a moment, whether this thought about the influence of the nature is vain, but he can't go on.

Though the poet has become serious and perplexed in the fourth section the nature gives him courage and spirit enough to stand there with a sense of delight and pleasure. This is so typical of Wordsworth that it seems he can't write poetry without recounting his personal experiences, especially those of his childhood. Here, he also begins from the earliest of his days! It was first the coarse pleasures in his 'boyish days', which have all gone by now.

The fifth and last section continues with the same meditation from where the poet addresses his younger sister Dorothy, whom he blesses and gives advice about what he has learnt. He says that he can hear the voice of his own youth when he hears her speak, the language of his former heart; he can also "Read my former pleasure in the soothing lights of thy wild eyes".

The poet has expressed his honest and natural feelings to nature's superiority. The language is very simple and lucid that one is not tired of reading it again and again. The medium of this poem is an elevated blank verse.

Q. 2. Do you like singing film songs? Write down why you do so?

Ans. Film songs are entertaining. They delight us. They give us a type of pleasure and we feel good. We like to sing them again and again. The music and the words of film songs remove boredom and we sing them when we feel relaxed.

Q. 3. Imagine that the government has banned film songs. What would happen then?

Ans. Film songs are part of our life. We hear them every day. There are dedicated television channels which telecast film songs. There are radio channels which broadcast songs round the clock and we listen to them whenever we are free. They are very entertaining. Banning them by the government means depriving us from out right to entertain. The people never tolerate the government banning the film songs. That will be very harsh for the song and music lovers.

Q. 4. Note down a few points regarding your plans for reading of this course.

Ans. I will take one month for one block. There are total eight blocks and it will take eight months to complete the course. I will read the introduction and take note the key points and them proceed to the poem. I will read them word by word to understand. I will take the help of teachers at the study centre in case I do not understand any poems. There are also assignments and I will submit them in times. In the four months before the exam, I will go through the notes and the questions to make myself ready for the exam

Q. 5. How would you prepare for your exams? Note down at least five points in the space provided below.

Ans. I will prepare in the following ways:

- I will start preparing before four months of the exams.
- I will divide the entire course and give equal time to each paper.
- For BEGE-106, I will go through the notes and study as per the model question paper.
- Starting from the poetic devices, genres and different metrical compositions, we will read the poems and understand the text.
- A day before the exams, I will focus on the notes I have taken.
